Claire Babineaux-Fontenot has been the CEO of Feeding America since 2018, overseeing a network of 200 Food Banks. Under her leadership, the organization navigated the challenges of the COVID-19 pandemic, distributing over 6 billion meals. She has developed programs to face immediate needs with long term solutions.

Before entering the nonprofit sector, she spent 13 years at Walmart, where she rose to Executive Vice President and Global Treasurer, managing financial operations across 28 countries.

Her achievements have earned global recognition, including being named in the TIME 100 list of most influential people in 2020 and TIME's Women of the Year for 2025.

Claire's commitment to service is deeply rooted in her upbringing as one of 108 children in a family that prioritized fostering and adoption. She is scheduled to step down from Feeding America April 2026 after nearly a decade of transformative impact.
